DESCRIPTION

I hope you will enjoy this note-for-note transcription of the wonderful Zambra by the great Flamenco guitarist, Juan Serrano, from his 1962 Elektra recording Ole, La Mano! The Zambra is a beautiful flamenco form that has the strongest Arabic influence. As it is typical for Flamenco guitarists to improvise and change their pieces with subsequent performances, Juan Serrano's Zambra evolved over the span of his career; the Ole, La Mano! recording being the first of several variations of the piece. A second version appeared on the 1967 RCA recording The Flashing, Glittering World of Flamenco Guitar under the title Zambra Maroqui. Serrano's Zambra was then introduced on the 1987 Soundboard TV DVD and then later featured on the 1994 Mel Bay instructional video Juan Serrano Flamenco Guitar (released on DVD in 2010). In 1997, Serrano released his transcription of the then current version of Zambra in the Mel Bay publication King of the Flamenco Guitar under the title "Fantasy (Zambra)." It is my fondness of the 1962 Ole, La Mano!

recording that inspired me to transcribe this particular rendition of Serrano's Zambra, a transcription which had not before been released to the public. Although this transcription is "note for note" to the Ole, La Mano! recording, it should be understood that flamenco scores are often used as a guideline, allowing some room for improvisation on the part of the performer.
